

ABSTRACT

A multi-component environmentally responsive polymeric system, having at least two environmentally responsive polymeric components capable of undergoing a transition that results in a sharp increase in viscosity in response to a change in temperature at a predetermined body site, wherein the at least two components display different reverse thermal gelation behavior in the human body.